Tim in KY There is an unclassified climb that begins 21 kilometers into that race and crests at 35 km. There is another unclassified climb that crests with a sprint point exactly halfway through the race. The first classified climb is a Cat 2 that starts with 70 km to go and crests with 50 km left. The climb is long but averages only 4.6%. There is a very short 10% ramp halfway up. There is then a 39 km descent to the start of the finishing climb. The finale is 11 km long with the steepest section starting with 3 km to go. 05-14-2021 02:29:44 pm

Tim in KY Kilometer zero is scheduled at 12:50. Finish is imagined either side of 11:15, keeping in mind that all of the previous three stages finished well outside the slowest imaginable time. Forecast is for partly cloudy with a slight chance of showers near the finish. Temps in the low 20s at the start dropping into the mid-teens as the route moves inland. 05-14-2021 02:31:57 pm

BusterSci Just saw the replay of yesterday's sprint on the pre-race show. Â Ewan wasn't faster than the next two guys, he just got the first jump and then kept that gap the whole way. Â Now, he probably had that little bit left that he could have used if someone came alongside. Â But what I saw was he won by knowing when to go-- which suggests there is hope for other sprinters. Â I look forward to seeing him and SammyBe head to head. 05-15-2021 06:28:32 am

Tim in KY Neither climb today looks tough enough to provoke a GC battle.Â I expect the break will stay away. And the whole peloton probably expects that 05-15-2021 06:29:13 am
