Tim in KY The first categorized climb of the day starts just 34 kilometers into the stage. It is the Umbrail Pass, at 2500 meters it is the highest point reached by this year's Giro. From that summit there is 86 km of descent to the valley road. After 35 km of flat comes the Cat 1 Passo Pineo, 23 km divided into three sections. The first and third average above 7%. The middle is flatish, averaging around 3%. After a very short descent comes the Cat 2 finale. It averages 6.1% but the final 2 km are at 12%.

BusterSci Early afternoon we have a major storm system moving in that will cause flooding rains. ^ So I'll be pulling the boat out a day early and we'll head home a day early (tomorrow.) ^ An interesting thing about the geology up here is the ground has almost no capacity to absorb rain. ^ Anything that isn't lake or bog is on many billion year old Canadian Shield rock. ^ Soil is generally just a few inches thick. ^ Man foundations are just drilled into the rock after the bits of topsoil is scraped away. ^ So when it rains it's all runoff. ^ The positive is that after the rain things dry out in minutes.

05-21-2024
08:09:02 am

Katie Lane So they're cutting out the first part including the big climb/descent over the Umbrial Pass and starting the stage at what would have been km 85, at around 7:30 central time (8:30 eastern). Or until they change their minds again.

05-21-2024
08:47:11 am

Katie S I read about Biermans' crash yesterday. 25 METERS down a ravine. he gets back up, and finishes the day, says his back, hip and foot hurt. I am not at all surprised that he did not start today. Frightening.

05-21-2024

05-21-2024
09:19:01 am

Charlie in Tenn Tim, I have to clean out the dishwasher and dish drainer, then clean the dishes from last night and this morning, then I can get the drawer to the sink and actually clean it. My wife cooked last night. Some low calorie vegetable latkes, smoked salmon, cream cheese, capers. You would be hard pressed to imagine how many dirty dishes this caused. Knives, forks, blender, food processor, plates, pans, etc. Again, very thankful for the meal but clean up is a horror. The vegetable bin is soaking.

05-21-2024
09:38:03 am

Katie S BTW: As you know, I had the niece this past weekend and "forced" her to watch the Giro. She really got into it and was hollering and cheering for Nairo (calling him Nairo!!!) and expressed great consternation when Pogi caught him. I told her about our fantasy league and that if Nairo won, it would help me a lot. She's that age (10) when grownups -- especially aunts/uncles and grandparents -- are still godlike and so was an ardent supporter. It really made the stage even more fun. We may need a U-23 Pub.

05-21-2024

05-21-2024
09:43:28 am

Katie S Local angle!!! Galena is the official state mineral of the U.S. states of Kansas,[14] Missouri,[15] and Wisconsin;[16] the former mining communities of Galena, Kansas,[17][18] Galena, Illinois,[19] and Galena, Alaska[20] take their names from deposits of this mineral.

BusterSci Going back to trees, attached is a picture of a blown down tree in the BWCA. It's not my photo. Generally, you see bare rock where the tree used to be. Trees are actually a big creator of soil up here, because they often start in crack of rocks, or depressions filled with duff, and as they grow the exposed roots trap decomposed leaves and needles, etc. and the soil builds. So also attached is an example of that at a campsite.
