02:19:23 pm

Tim in KY The first 73 kilometers are basically flat until a short Cat 4. The road then rises slightly over the next 20 km to a plateau that goes on for 34 km. Then starts a 10.5 km long Cat 2 at 5.9%. The Cat 2 peaks with 58 km to go. After a 23 km descent, the road tips up again to the base of the Zoncolan.

Tim in KY The final climb is 14.1 kilometers long and averages 8.5%. But the last four km average 13% with several ramps above 20%. The Zoncolan is usually climbed starting from the town of Ovaro, but, as in 2003, this climb starts in Sutrio. It is considered the "easier" route.

Rocket City Gal Good morning, fellow LUGnuts!

05-22-2021

Rocket City Gal I was reflecting yesterday about how much I missed Mons chiming in, his jokes, his essays.... when I received a nice thank-you note from his sister Cheryl.

Rocket City Gal I donâ€™t know how much of todayâ€™s stage I will be able to catch live. I have a van full oâ€™ tie dye heading to an outdoor market fir the third week in a row. Â Might as well do something while Iâ€™m in a boot. Â But I did talk with orthodocâ€™s nurse and unlike my internist he said itâ€™s OK to bike wearing an ASO ankle brace as long as I avoid situations that make it grumpy. Yay!!!!

05-22-2021

05-22-2021
07:33:55 am

05-22-2021
07:36:07 am

Joanna in Virginia So, a "horse stuff" story. Over the many, many years that I have had horses, I have acquired a LOT of stuff. I have two horse trailers, one is a wonderful 4-horse gooseneck (that has just returned from being refurbished and cleaned) and a smaller two-horse trailer. Both have large tack room spaces. I had to completely unload the 4-horse trailer tack room before sending it off for repairs and cleaning and spent yesterday re-populating it with needed items for the show season. Well, in this process, I thought I would also explore the "stuff" in the 2-horse trailer tack room. I found bell boots, lots and lots and lots of bell boots. These are protective boots that wrap around the front hooves to protect the heels from strikes from the hind feet. I will never have to purchase another set of bell boots, ever. Even plan on donating some to my clients. LOL! Then there is all the shampoo and conditioner I found. I think I am "set" for awhile.

05-22-2021
07:37:50 am

Joanna in Virginia Oh...and then there are the saddle pads. Good Grief!

Charlie in Tenn Millie and I had our second walk around Mom's backyard. Not big but lots of squirrel/rabbit paths through the fences to check out, a dog across one fence, and possibly a cat along the back side fence. Charlie in Tenn My wife's Dad is the Head Engineer (some title like that) at the Flaming Gorge Dam on the Green River in NE Utah. Sheila (and her sisters) worked as a tour guide at the dam for several summers when she was in college and we both worked there one summer after we were married. Yes, I was a dam tour guide. I enjoyed it because you could chat about anything that the tourists wanted to talk about. Was everything absolutely 100% accurate? Probably not but I did not make up stuff for entertainment value.
